In Memorium

Editors note: Even as the first small print run of the Golden Age Comic Book Index was being delivered to a small number of friends and collaborators, Howard Keltner's fragile health failed him. Howard passed away in late July 1998. It was a terrible loss to all who knew him.

Howard's friend Bill Schelly, the publisher of many works chronicling the early days of comic fandom, wrote this eulogy published in Comic Buyer's Guide. We could write nothing more fitting or appropriate, so we offer this in memory of our friend.

Recently we were all greatly saddened by the death of Howard Keltner on July 29th, after a long illness. In the three weeks that have elapsed since his passing, my thoughts often return to the only time I ever met Howard in person, at the fandom reunion held during the Wizard Comicon in 1997.

Howard Keltner was one of those people who made you feel good about being a member of the human race.

This is quite a statement, but I'm certain no one who knew him would take issue with it. In a world that seems to be becoming increasingly crass, Howard was a true gentleman: considerate, soft spoken, modest. And it's not like he didn't have plenty to brag about, if it had been in his nature to do so.

As a founder of Star-Studded Comics, one of the most popular fanzines of the 1960s and early 1970s, he could easily lay claim to the title Big Name Fan. As the creator of Doctor Weird, one of the handful of amateur heroes to achieve widespread recognition, he could have fashioned himself into a "Bob Kane of fandom." The author of the Golden Age Comic Books Index could easily lay claim to being one of the foremost researchers of the comic book field. Certainly, the fact that he has inked dozens of pages by Jim Starlin, not to mention fan favorites Grass Green and Biljo White, gives him a position that might be characterized as "fandom's foremost inker."

Bragging just wasn't in Howard's nature. There was no false modesty in him, either. Keltner was able to keep his achievements in perspective. Besides, there are plenty of others who gladly sing his praises.

At the aforementioned "Fandom Reunion 1997" (a gathering of members of comicdom's earliest years) Howard met his long-time collaborators Jerry Bails and Grass Green for the first time, though he had known them for over a third of a century. He showed us photographs of the beautiful landscape oil paintings he had done since arthritis forced him to give up comic book inking. Everyone marveled at them, for his mastery of color and lighting in that difficult medium was astounding. True to form, Howard was self-effacing. I do think I detected a twinkle in his eye, as the sincere compliments flew across the table toward him. Praise from his fan-friends obviously meant a lot.

For my part, it was wonderful to be able to spend several hours with Howard Keltner, sharing meals, memories and small talk. How many people do you know who can inspire you simply by being themselves?

We miss you, Howard.

Your legacy will continue.

FOREWORD

I never expected to see the day that someone would pay $100,000 for a 10¢ comic book. But it happened. I've been involved in so-called Comic Fandom since its very beginning, the early 1960s, and I can remember when I paid dealer Claude Held as much as a dollar each for certain issues. Privately, I thought that was outrageous. But later, when I sold almost all my collection for an average of just about the same per issue, I privately thought that some people had more dollars than sense. Had I been able to keep the books until now, I could likely build and furnish a three-story home for my wife and myself, plus another just like it for our son and his wife.

Which brings me to my point, and the purpose of this index: I have no idea what the average selling price of a Golden Age comic book in good condition would be today, but I think it would be shocking if someone were to figure it out. If you were contemplating paying, let's just say, $200 for a certain issue, wouldn't you appreciate knowing what was in it? Twenty years ago, friend Jerry Bails and myself published an INDEX TO GOLDEN AGE COMIC BOOKS which gave just such information. But it was in a different format, one with which I have never been satisfied. Most of the information that you see in this index was presented therein, with at least two notable exceptions. One was the date. For example, when I listed ACTION COMICS I just gave the dates as #1(Jun,38) - #295(Dec,62), monthly. If you wanted to know the date of #153, you had to figure it out. In this edition the date is given right above each issue number. But the best improvement that this edition's format has to offer is in the number of pages allotted to each strip. This is information that I didn't have 20 years ago, and I have been all this time obtaining it.

It's not likely that there will ever be another edition, unless someone else does it. Even so, I sincerely hope the information contained herein will be of benefit to you in some way.

Be careful how you spend all that money!

Howard Keltner

ORGANIZATION OF THIS INDEX

This index covers the years 1935 through 1955 and is organized by publisher. It begins with the oldest, or first, which is National Periodicals Publications, Inc., or DC Publications, Inc. as it is currently known, and ends with Magazine Enterprises, the last to enter the market while still falling within the scope of this publication. Within each publisher's section, the comic books are presented in the same manner, from the oldest, or first, title to the last books introduced by that particular publisher. That is why, for example, under MLJ Magazines you will find BLUE RIBBON COMICS presented first and THE BLACK HOOD COMICS last, and so on. This gives you a good opportunity to follow the progress of a publisher's policy as time went by.

Some publishers are considered to be "minor" in that they only published a very few issues, often only one or two, of few titles, again in some cases only one or two. These publishers and their titles are grouped together under the general heading of "Miscellaneous Publishers" following the groupings of the other "major" publishers.

FORMAT AND PRESENTATION OF INFORMATION

For each title indexed herein, you will find a wealth of data. First, the title and the exact name of the publisher (including any issue numbers in which it changed) are provided. For each issue number, you will find the date (year and month), and the total number of pages in that issue, including the covers. The page count is highlighted when it is different from the previous issue; it usually decreases due to the war time paper shortage and inflation.

Listed down the left side of the page for each title, you can see the names of the strips that appeared in that title, again from the oldest to the latest to be introduced in the title. The feature name is given exactly as it appears in the book to the best of my knowledge, based upon data supplied to me by collectors over the last 40-plus years. When this name changed it is listed on the next line down and preceded by a (/) slash, to indicate a continuation of the strip under a different name.

When the strip name is highlighted it denotes a costumed and/or super powered character. Information following the feature name, and given in parenthesis, generally denotes an occasional or sporadic variation on strip title. Data in brackets is simply information about the strip that I have deemed to be important.

Directly under each issue number and on the same line as a strip name is a number. This is the total number of pages allotted to that strip in that particular issue. If this number is underlined, it means the strip was featured on the front cover. A beginning parenthesis preceding this number indicates the first appearance of the strip in that title, and an ending parenthesis indicates the last appearance.

Incidentally, you will note that the total number of pages allotted to all strips in an issue does not equal the total page count for the issue given on the top line above the date and year. This is because I did not include anything that was not a strip, items such as editorials, letters pages, ads, factual pieces (such as data about sports personalities or movie stars), text stories, puzzle pages, articles, and so on.

Items of special interest, such as origin stories, guest appearances by other characters, crossovers, etc., are submitted in brackets in the form of notes, or else are printed on the next line down. All other notations, either about a title or a strip, should be self-explanatory.

It has been my purpose to show the information in as clear and concise a manner as possible, at the same time trying to be as thorough as I could in presenting the mountain of data that I have accumulated. I only regret that I could not give information about editors, writers and artists as well, but this was just impossible, as I did not set out in the beginning to collect this type of data. But I sincerely hope that what is presented herein will prove to be of benefit to all concerned.

Who Was That Masked Man, Anyway?

An unauthorized biography of a Son of Texas.

Howard Keltner is a man for all seasons. Just pick one. Although readers of this work will know Howard as a comic book fan of long standing and many important achievements, there's a lot more to him than his love of comics. But that's a good place to start reeling off his accomplishments.

Howard was there at the earliest parts of the Golden Age as a young reader. He was captivated by the pulps and the four-color worlds of the early comics. They quickly established a place in his heart that they would never relinquish. Although the first comic that he ever purchased has been lost to the mists of time, the legend goes that he still has his set of Planet Stories, the ones that he bought off the newsstand as they were published. (This particular legend is corroborated by his lovely wife Reva, so it's certainly true.)

As organized comic fandom was forming in the early 60s, Howard's continued interest propelled him into the forefront. Larry Herndon, Buddy Saunders and Howard together formed the Texas Trio. They produced and published the famous Star-Studded Comics, featuring some of the best of the earliest fanzine material in fandom. Howard himself did both artwork and stories in those days, and his Dr. Weird character has lately been revived and published in Big Bang Comics.

Aside from being involved in the creative end of comics, Howard is a tabulator and organizer par excellence. The origins of the index you are holding go back into the 50s when Howard originally kept scribbled notes on his favorite features and comics. The project expanded to the point where The Golden Age Comic Books Index (the first edition) was published in 1976. A groundbreaking project of the time, it has remained an excellent reference over the intervening twenty years. Since that first edition, Howard has been laboring to make it better, more complete and more authoritative. Determined not to take short-cuts or publish an incomplete work, Howard gathered the final bits of data in the last months of 1997. The result is here, and it has been a long time coming. As he likes to say, it has been forty years in the making.

Lest you think that Howard is one-dimensional, we can tell you that he has been verified as an excellent guitar payer and singer. Expanding his interest in comic art into a new venue, he has become an accomplished fine artist. He works in oils and his ability with landscapes is stunningly beautiful.

Living with Reva and Howard is Gizmo the cat, the final member of the household. The Keltners have recently been delighted with their two new grandchildren, Madison and Mallory Keltner, twin girls.

So yes, you can see that Howard Keltner is truly a man for all seasons. He, and all of us involved with his project, hope that you will enjoy the latest fruits of his love for comics.

NEW YORK WORLD'S FAIR COMICS

Detective Comics Inc

Note: No date given either issue, except just the year, but the 1939 issue publication date pre dates SUPERMAN #1 by about three weeks. The 1939 issue sold for 25¢ at the Fair and 15¢ for later newsstand distribution. The 1940 issue sold for 15¢. Neither issue was numbered. This title is considered the predecessor to WORLD'S BEST COMICS #1, issued in Spring, 1941, and changed to WORLD'S FINEST COMICS with issue #2.

Note: The Justice Society of America begins in #3. Page counts for each member's adventures are given for each issue through #37, after which the members split up into teams, which varied from issue to issue. Total pages are supplied for each story, including intro and concluding chapters in which all members usually appeared. Guest and cameo appearances by non members are noted. The plus sign (+) at left indicates that the character continued as a member of the JSA.

Note: Beginning with issue #38 the format of the J.S.A. stories changed. Instead of each member having his own chapter, the group split up into teams and the number of chapters was reduced. The breakdown of members in the various chapters cannot be given effectively within this format because nearly every chapter lineup was different; plus, sometimes the chapters overlapped and many times members appeared in different chapters. This was really a more logical format, but is a huge headache for a compiler/indexer. Therefore, given below are the number of chapters in each issue, and the number of pages for each chapter. All members participated in all the adventures except for a very few exceptions, which are notated.

INDEX

1935 - 1955

Feature Index

Following is a cross-reference (by Feature) to help navigate through the main index. It lists the Features and then details the Titles where they appeared.

Note that relatively minor differences result in two different listings in the name of completeness: The Mighty Atom is different from The Atom, and each is listed, although there is a note that directs you from one to the other. This cross-index will not tell you this character is in All-Star Comics, since he is part of The Justice Society of America feature in that title. Again, this is an attempt at listing Features, and not characters.

Many features changed names over their lifetimes. For some, this was accompanied with a shift in lead characters or point of view. For others, there was no apparent reason for a name change. These changes are noted to allow you to follow the feature through its various forms. If you are so inclined, you can find all the appearances of Stupidman and the Monkeyteers, no matter what title they are going under.

Almost everything listed in the main index is included here in the spirit of completeness. Only the books in the main index are covered, but that ought to be enough for a lot of us!

Happy hunting-!
